To the NRC,

I am writing in reference to an article in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution regarding the use of contaminated scrap metal for use in commercial items. I would like to point out the obvious in saying that putting radioactive material out in the general population is idiotic at best. Basically, that would be killing everyone slowly. I'm sure that those who propose this would not want products made from this material in their homes and for them to want to put it in mine is criminal. I'm going to go a step further than some of the letters in opposition that I am sure you are receiving and add that the reactors should be shut down until a viable AND sensible solution can be found to the mounting waste crisis.

Furthermore, I believe that adequate time should be given to let the public know that such ideas are even being considered so that responses may be reviewed.
