Subject: low level waste

In Roman times, what did them in was excessive lead in their food and water. It poisoned the population. To even think of giving innocent consumers materials laced with low level radiation is tantamount to murder. More and more evidence indicates that low level radiation is just as dangerous and deadly as high level radiation--over a period of years. It's simply a slower death. See John Gofman's work --a distinguished scientist who does not agree with your dreadful, industry compliant agency.

We are NOT guinea pigs for your failure to reign in the industry. DO NOT foist on the public anything that smacks of possible danger. It's immoral and irresponsible. And just as consumers are now suing FDA for blindly and aggressively pursuing Genetically modified foods (against the reports of its own scientists), we the consumers will not only sue, but hopefully put you all behind bars. How long can you hide behind a Federal bureaucracy? Industry is out of control and you have become its flunkies.

Withdraw any materials now laced with this deadly stuff!!!!

And hold back on putting any more into materials we need to live and work with.
