case release procedures would no longer be necessary.
How can the NRC allow further radioactive contamination of the public — you and me, even our children — without us knowing about it? The public comment period for the proposed new rules ends Dec. 22 and gives all of us an extremely brief chance to tell the NRC how we feel about radiation contaminating our daily household items. The impact of this rule is global and long-term in its effect on people and the environment. The NRC should carefully isolate these materials. Additionally, the NRC should extend the deadline for public comment to allow for a fair evaluation of its
