I am contacting you regarding your current request (Energy Solutions Import License Application IW023) to import 20,000 (or any amount for that matter) tons of radioactive waste into the United States. I am entirely opposed to this action as is everyone that I know. I am thoroughly aware of the potential for such materials being used as a weapon, and perhaps this is why you suggest bringing it to the U.S. However, if a country is going to work with such material, then that country has the responsibility to be able to deal with all phases of it, including disposal inside of its own borders. To selfishly take the benefits and then to attempt to pass along the negatives of nuclear energy/science is completely unacceptable.

We are not a dumping ground for anyone. Why not see if other countries would like to swap some toxic waste with us for the service? I think that we would then hear an outcry against the U.S. for attempting to use other nations as a dump. Such a double standard is completely unacceptable. If any nation fails to properly dispose of any such waste, then the world has a right, an obligation, to hold that country responsible, civilly and criminally, for any problems that arise from their failures.

Do not bring this waste into our country.

Appreciatively,
