Hello Mr. Gody;

I appreciate your returning my call last Tuesday regarding allegations made by Mr. [Redacted]

I recognize that NRC's procedures and practices, for very good reason, limited what you could say about the matter to the point of your not being able to even confirm that Mr. [Redacted] had made allegations. I am very supportive of those limits, since their primary purpose is to protect the identity of allegers to protect them from potential retaliation.

In other cases like this one, I have obtained express, written authorization from the alleger to discuss the underlying allegations with the NRC staff. In such cases, the NRC staff typically contacted the allegers independently to confirm that they had in fact authorized my involvement.

Attached is a letter dated August 9, 2007, signed by Mr. [Redacted] authorizing POGO and UCS to discuss allegation RIV-2006-A-0033 with the NRC. Assuming the NRC accepts this authorization, after whatever confirmatory steps deemed necessary, I'd like to discuss the allegation with the NRC staff.

My first priority in this allegation matter concerns documents related to the case (e.g., OI interview summaries, transcripts, etc.).

Mr. [Redacted] requested those records under a freedom of information act (FOIA) request. The NRC took his $700 check, cashed it, and have not provided him with the documents. Since the NRC seems unwilling to provide the service that Mr. [Redacted] has long ago paid for but not received, I think it would be fair for NRC to refund Mr. [Redacted] his money. UCS will contact a member of Congress, probably the Chair of an NRC oversight committee, and ask that Congress request the same documents from NRC - as we recently did in the Palisades case.

Thanks,
