Subject: What a con game

Dear Reader,

The kind of propaganda that has been put forward as truth about spent fuel rods and their containment is just a way of pretending that nuclear power is safe and protected. It isn't true. Spent fuel rods need so much thick, dense repositories, that saying otherwise is a pretense about nuclear power being inexpensive and harmless. This kind of storage is unsafe and dangerous, creating risks for anyone around these "storage" containers. The truth must be told about the risks being touted to be a safe way to keep nuclear waste.

Thank you,

Patricia Orlinski
