Subject: Nuclear waste not safe anywhere

Dear WCO outreach,

I am writing to remind you that nuclear waste is not safe, no matter where you put it and no matter how well the containment sites are build.

The wisest course is to build the best containment storage possible, to last as long as possible. Someday, the price must be paid for storing this material.

If the powers that be insist on making anything with this process, there will be toxic waste. How much the earth and civilization can take of this toxic material without ending life is the question that should be on everyone's mind.

Sincerely,
Patricia Jerrells
